NO GARBAGE COLLECTION MEMORIAL DAY

Monday, May 31 is a legal holiday, Memorial Day, and garbage and trash will not be collected by the town of Appomattox. Instead, the sanitary truck will run Tues. June 1.

Betty Jean Rhodenizer (Mrs. Clifford O.), who has had no formal training in art, has completed the second design for an official design, this one (above) the official arm patch for the Appomattox County Rescue Squad. Squad president Ray Noble, presented Mrs. Rhodenizer a patch in calling attention to Rescue Squad Week in Virginia. Mrs. Rhodenizer, together with her husband, Investigator Rhodenizer, now of Appomattox, designed an historic and colorful emblem adopted by the Roanoke County Board of Supervisors as the official seal for Roanoke County in 1968.

Rescue Squad Arm Patch

On April 9, 1865 General Robert E. Lee surrendered his Confederate Forces to General Ulysses S. Grant and virtually ended a war which had torn apart the Union for four years. Our Nation was reunited at the village of Appomattox Court House, Virginia. This event of over a century ago provided the inspiration for the Appomattox County Rescue Squad patch which made its debut in the early months of 1971.

The handshake of the two opposing Generals provides the central theme for this patch. Blue and gray sleeved hands clasp above a cross of green on a field of white. The outer edge of the round patch bears the inscription "Appomattox County Rescue Squad" in green letters and is encircled by a green border.

Lee And Grant At Appomattox

The years appeared to have rolled back to April 6, 1865, as Lee and Grant appeared on the steps of the McLean House Wednesday, May 20, 1971. Both generals are portrayed by the same man, Joe Early, as part of a Washington, D.C. television special (WTOP, channel 9), Charles Horich is the producer. A white horse for Lee, a dark horse for Grant, soldiers, muskets and flags gave an authentic look to the scene, with men of the 3rd Infantry, Old Guard, from Fort Myer, Va. here to portray men of the blue and gray in the film.
